St. James Township Board

On March 3rd, 2004 the St. James Township Board was under some pressure to match its previous record for brevity (8 minutes), but didn’t come close. It got off to a good start. Terms for Dave Adams and John Fiegen on the Board of Appeals and Don Vyse on the Airport Committee were extended, and the acquisition of a Day Park north of Lake Street was approved. Most of the Petritz property, 500’ on Lake Michigan, will pass to the Township, thanks to a Recreation Grant—made possible by the creation of a Recreation Plan. The grant requires a 25% match, but the Petritz family has supplied this by dropping the price well below market.

A letter from the EMS requesting a meeting to discuss its budget was mentioned, but not distributed.

County Commissioner Shirley Roloff intended to spend a day here discussing Beaver Island’s problems, but snow kept the planes from flying. The Director of the Tricounty Management planned to come on March 15th to help with our emergency planning. The Annual Meeting was set for March 27th.

The Board had asked PABI to present its latest plans, so Judy Lanier began by showing Mary Rose’s painting of the harborscape as a mouth with one very important tooth missing, a void to be filled by the Community House. She discussed the evolution of planning, starting from the 1998 “wishful thinking” that had led to an initial 18,600 ft² design, deemed too large and too costly, proceeding down to 1999’s 9,800 ft² split plan, in which another 8,400 ft² building would contain the theater on the Brothers’ Road. This was also deemed too expensive (according to Bob Vanville, who took over the presentation) which led to today’s moderate design for a Welcome Center, a Youth Center, and a Theater. Bob revealed that deals were being made to show first-run movies and to collaborate with Interlochen on the staging of events.

The advantages of the Community House were said to be multiple: it will help attract and develop talent; it will provide a much-needed gathering place; and by improving the quality of life will be a general economic boon. The Theater was expected to pay for its own operating costs. $912,000 was in the construction fund, and another $30,000 in an endowment fund. A new idea being investigated was to do the Welcome Center floor as a tile mosaic depicting the archipelago in true scale. The Community House will be the first thing people see upon entering the harbor, so everyone wants it to look as nice as possible.

The board, though, was worried about possible congestion. Don Vyse thought it was “a good idea, but the wrong place,” and suggested putting it on the Brothers’ Road. Our youth, though, wants to be “where the action is,” in the center of our bright lights; and the Welcoming Center too has to be downtown. Another Board member suggested putting just the Theater part on the Brothers’ Road. The problem was two-fold: first, two buildings would cost much more than one; and secondly, funds donated to recreate the Dockside Market could not be used. Don Vyse thought that if the Theater were separated and placed on the Brothers’ Road, perhaps the townships would be more supportive and lend their skill at obtaining grants to the project.

In other matters the Board approved buying new road signs as needed for about $100 each. The old Medical Center building will have its own budget, like the rock crusher.

Bud Cruikshank pointed out that the hedge on Main Street near the Marina was taller than allowed, and posed a safety hazard; when walking in the street (the sidewalks aren’t cleaned), it’s difficult to see oncoming traffic.

St. James Planning Commission

The Planning Commission met on March 4th, 2004 to consider two cases, and commented on other matters as well. The updated Zoning Ordinance had been returned by the Charlevoix County PC, which repeated its earlier suggestions. Some had been considered and rejected, but others were thought to be good. However the PC voted to recommend approval to the Town Board as is, and to put these good ideas on a list already started of matters to be resolved.
in the next round of modifications (such as various aspects of rentals.)

The new Master Plan would take 18 to 24 months, and was starting with the gathering of historical information. Representatives of Gosling Czubak will hold a public meeting in May to gather ideas for its survey.

The matter of whether or not Don Tritsch should recuse himself on voting concerning the Community House was addressed. Clerk Jean Palmer read a letter in which the Township Attorney stressed that the appearance of conflict of interest should be avoided. Jack Gallagher, PABI's pro bono legal Adviser, explained that “conflict of interest” required an opportunity for financial gain. John Fiegen thought it was an individual decision in this matter. Marilyn Damstra pointed out that some people filled so many public service positions that in some cases a quorum would be difficult to obtain if recusing followed strict rules. The consensus was that Don Tritsch had enough integrity to decide for himself what was appropriate.

Peaine Township Board

The Township Board was primarily concerned with fine-tuning the budget it would present at the March 27th, 2004 Annual Meeting. To that end, discussion centered on several of the project budgets that make up the overall $263,000 budget (which includes a contingency of $9,145.) The Planning Commission analyzed its expenses from the previous year ($13,850, with $8,285 for meetings’ compensation the largest single item), rounded it up, and added the first year's Gisling Czubak charge for Master Plan work to come up with $19,750.

There was some comment about the $16,000 for Trails and Parks. Last year the Trails Committee spent $1,800 and discovered there was nothing left in the fund because of repairs that were needed at the Bill Wagner Campground. The Trails Committee would like $5,000, and agreed to propose its own budget.

Many line items will be matched by St. James: $24,595 for the EMS, $14,000 for Planning/Zoning, $13,329 for the Assessor's salary, $11,000 for a second deputy, $8,197 for the Historical Society, $6,000 for Planner, $5,016 for the Zoning Administrator's salary, $4,500 for the Youth Consortium, $3,000 for Township Hangar expenses, $2,000 for the Assessor's Project (the ongoing gradual elimination of past glitches) $2,000 for the Cemetery Fund, and $2,000 for Fireworks. In addition, $20,000 will be set aside in the Town Hall Expansion account (which already has $40,000.)

The Road Fund would be $66,071, which includes $20,000 for one application of dust control, $20,000 set aside for future road expansion, and a $6,071 contingency. The $197,200 Waste Management Fund would include $25,000 for equipment—the last payment on its containers, and a new fork lift. Wages and employer taxes are $80,380; boat freight $19,000.

During a discussion of the Airport Fund, it came out that the budget is chancy because the DNR is challenging the long-standing rule that it pay property tax on its land; this amounted to $23,000 for Peaine last year.

Before adjourning, Judy Laniier stated that the Planning Commission recommended that the Zoning Ordinance, just back from the County, be approved as is, and that some of the County's suggestions be put on the list for consideration when this Ordinance is revised.

Joint Planning Commissions

In the middle of March both Planning Commissions met in joint session at the Peaine Town Hall. First Peaine's PC had to consider two particular cases, splitting apart a twenty-acre parcel and considering a well-thought-out development plan for creating 21 parcels from a 310-acre tract south of Greene’s Lake; it approved both.

Then the joint PCs took up a discussion about rentals, for which a dozen interested residents were in attendance. This will be one of the most important issues to be addressed in the first revision of the new Zoning Ordinance, which is about to be passed.

The problem is, at present there is Continued on Page 6.

some concern about whether or not the quasi-commercial enterprise of renting one's property should be allowed in a residential zone. On the one hand, the rental option has made enough of a financial difference to some people to courage them to build, which has been good for our economy. But a few complaints have been made that one or another renter has disturbed the tranquility of a neighbor.

The present ordinance is not definitive. It indicates residents are for families, and a family is defined as having not more than four unrelated members.
Thus one reading would be that not more than four unrelated people can rent a residence at a given time.

Yet the Michigan Supreme Court has said, according to an audience member, that renting one's home is not a commercial endeavor. The general feeling was that preserving the ability to rent was important to our economy, and that if homes could not be rented we might see the arrival of condo developments to meet the demand, and they would have a more pronounced impact on the environment. On the other hand, one person present complained that the renters next door were sometimes so rowdy that she could not get to sleep.

After much discussion the consensus was expressed by Bill Markey, who suggested two approaches: broadening the definition of family (or, as Judy Lanier had offered, adding the phrase
"...or renters") to guarantee the ability to rent, but also urging the Town Board to enact a nuisance ordinance (as St.
James has done) so particularly bad situations could be addressed.

The Annual Township Meetings

With little fanfare both townships held their Annual Meetings on March 27th 2004. Both were preceded by a Budget Meeting at which the budget for the coming year was approved, and both ratified continuing with its attorney, bank, engineer, auditor, and planner.

Peaine's was in the morning. Judy Lanier remarked at the outset that the biggest problem for which she's received comments is dust control:
something must be done, and she asked to have the topic on the next agenda.

John Works delivered a Supervisor's Report that mentioned the accomplishments of the past year, which were many: a new gravel pit, the boat ramp at the Wagner Campground fixed, trails and accesses marked, the East Side Fire Hall about to be built, the Health Center completed, the Peaine website up and running, and the Airport moving forward. The Planning Commission and Town Board demonstrated an ability to work through several thorny issues involving growth, roads, safety, and recreation. He thought Peaine had an excellent relationship with St. James.

In the public comments Doug Tilly noted that although the West Side Road had received more attention in the past two years, its repair and upkeep still lagged considerably behind the East Side Drive—a claim the supervisor did not dispute. Ivan Young returned to the matter of dust control, and others agreed that the one application we've scheduled (at a cost of $20,000, and on only some of Peaine's 70 miles of county roads) was not enough. Bags of Dow flake are available to residents, but this is also not enough so this matter will be studied in the coming year.

St. James Supervisor Don Vyse also delivered a glowing report about the past year's achievements. The Playground beach expansion is on track, including the attached parking lot. Efforts are continuing to secure a lease for Arranmore Park. The tennis courts were repaired, thanks to volunteer funding. The acquisition of the Whiskey Point Light is proceeding—the application has just been reworked for the third time. The Donegal Bay Bike Path was built, and its extension is being planned.

The 14-acre Day Park on the north shore is moving towards fruition. Public safety has been addressed; a sewer use plan implemented; the nuisance ordinance passed; and the new Zoning Ordinance approved. The Yacht Dock drawings have been accepted for construction; the Medical Center's former home is on the way to becoming a Government Building; and Senior Housing plans are looking for funding. Several short sections of road were paved in the past year.

The Supervisor alerted the public that several challenges lay ahead. The King's Highway pavement is falling apart; the Community House parking issue remains to be solved; new land at the Airport must be cleared; and the proposed equitable cost-sharing envisioned in his Fair Share plan has not received much support from Peaine. Nowhere is the problem more obvious than in the rock crusher, whose $27,400 operating cost was evenly split even though Peaine used, over the past 5 years, 82% of the gravel. Last year private contractors charged $10/yard; Peaine paid $5/yard for its gravel; and St. James was stuck at $15/.

Yet the Supervisor was encouraged to predict that with continued hard work from both townships, good results would accrue.
A Ghost Ship slices through the Ice

On March 26th a mystery began to unfold. Some people taking a lunch break in their car at Whiskey Point heard creaking and churning sounds somewhere to the southeast, yet no matter how hard they strained their eyes they could not see a thing. Far from going away, the noises grew louder, and others looping past the Light stopped to ask why they were staring. “Something’s there,” they were told. “Listen–it's very close. It’s almost upon us, but there's nothing visible.”

Finally someone stopped who knew the truth: the Coast Guard cutter had left Charlevoix at 10:00 a.m. to chop through the harbor ice. It was right where one might expect, totally masked by the fog.

The growing contingent retreated to the Ferry Dock, where they were joined by others who had felt the rumble of the ice in their bones. Soon the students came down the hill from school to stand on the dock's edge and peer into the grey-ness. Occasionally someone shouted, “I can see it! I can see it!” But they couldn’t—until she came through the last thick curtain a few hundred feet away.

When she was finally visible, cheers were raised, and the 15 Guardsmen leaning over the Acacia’s rails reciprocated with whoops and waves—equally glad to finally see their destination. As one might expect, jokes were bandied about: “We ought to put a target on the Emerald Isle.” “Not needed.”

The ice cracked apart in huge thick blocks whose two layers were as differently colored as an Oreo: a foot of dark ice, a foot of clear, evidence of an early rain that had covered the harbor with slush, which froze. The mighty ship stayed 15’ away from anything that might crinkle, making several passes to create a channel before disappearing again into the fog. Everyone went home, buoyed by what they had learned: Spring, bounteous spring, was right around the corner!

Ten Years Ago The Beacon announced it would not report on the St. Patrick's Day celebration because the Shamrock had functioned as a sanctuary, and its patrons’ right of privacy had to be respected.

Mary Blocksmma reported on the festivities of Dr. Lange at a semi-potluck dinner, a celebration organized to make sure he felt appreciated for his kindness, concern, and expertise.

A "Traveling Beaver Island All-stars" basketball team challenged the over-30 men of Charlevoix, and, led by Mike Green's 16 points and Greg Carey's 13, won 51-48. Four hundred dollars was raised for the Island school's "bleacher fund."

A letter was printed from Commissioner Rich Gillespie to the Road Commission's manager, asking for better (adequate) equipment for our roads, suggesting that the Townships might pay up to 2/3 of the ~$30,000 cost. He also sought to advance the stalled issue of county transport for Beaver Island.

The Beacon contained a story written by Paul Welke recounting a flight he made with Marilyn McFarland and Angel LeFevre to Los Angeles after the earthquake, to pick up Marilyn's sister and her three dogs and bring her to Michigan. While he was in Dalhart, Texas, he asked the airport officials if they remembered a plane being forced down by DEA officers six years earlier when it was suspected of running drugs from Mexico. When they did, he revealed that he and Ellen had been the flyers. He reported that when he reached LA, the visible damage was not as great as had been shown on TV. While he was gone our weather was so bad that Island Airways could not fly. But he saw no clouds once he'd crossed Lake Michigan until he returned. He averaged 180 mph flying out (12 hours) and 220 coming back (10 hours.)

The Beacon ran an article describing the operation of the Chamber of Commerce, which had recently replaced the Civic Association. At that time it was working with the State to preserve the Dockside Market. It organized the Fourth of July festivities, planted flowering crab trees around the harbor, printed and distributed a Beaver Island map, built and maintained a walleye pond through "Our Wildlife Club," provided salt blocks, and was expecting 21 more wild turkeys. Pam O'Brien was the Office Manager.

Twenty Years Ago The Beacon announced that the effort to purchase the Boat Company from John McGoff by a group of Island-affiliated people has now succeeded. On February 27th the new Beaver Island Boat Co. signed

Jim Gillingham wrote to express his feeling that it was unfair to blame the double-crested cormorants for being alone responsible for the decrease of fish. He challenged the notion that yellow perch and smallmouth bass were their favorite food, saying research revealed it to be alewives. He agreed that they do take many fingerlings released in the daytime by the DNR, but thought that could be improved by night releases. "These beautiful birds," he concluded, "along with a host of other shallow-water avian fish-eaters, including the Ring-billed and Herring Gulls, Mergansers, Caspian and Common Terns, and the Common Loons, have been fishing the waters of Lake Michigan long before man plied its waters. The Double-crested Cormorant belongs here and is indeed an important part of our natural ecosystem. It would be a great injustice to wage war on this bird, based on the spurious evidence put forth in last month's article."

an agreement to acquire McGoff’s B. I. Navigation Company. A month later the new company distributed a brochure describing the efforts it would now face to raise the needed money through a stock sale spearheaded by Ed Wojan and Bill McDonough, among others.

A special election was held to approve the purchase of 572’ of frontage and 20 acres at Iron Ore Creek for $48,500. It passed in St. James 88 - 13 and in Peaine 78 - 18.

The Historical Society moved forward on its plan to build a 40’ x 24’ tall barn at the Heritage Park. One idea for the Park, according to curator Shirley Gladish, was to build a replica of a typical Island log cabin. A suggestion was made to have a tape for the Protar Room describing why his life had been so special and such a boon to the Island.

Rich and Laura Gillespie were married; Ron Gregg became engaged; Hermie and John Kenwabikise welcomed baby Kathryn; and Greg and LynnAnne Cary welcomed baby Heather.

The St. James Town Board notes contained some interesting tidbits. A $1,200 payment scheduled for the Med Center was returned as not being needed. The building which became the Town Hall was appraised at $45,000 prior to its acquisition from the GSA. The Board voted to strengthen its Public Gathering Ordinance by subsuming it to a comparable county-wide ordinance. The Clerk agreed to ask the Road Commission to replace the defaced street signs. The Health Department ordered that a new well be installed at the Yacht Dock before July.

Father Herbert wrote to say his new posting at the Shrine of Our Lady of Consolation in Frenchtown Ohio would keep him too busy for him to attend Homecoming.

An editorial warned against letting dogs chase game, which was dropping in number. Deer hunting was said to have been way down in ‘83, and rabbit and grouse hunting bad for years. Squirrels were up, but few hunters were likely to come here just to shoot them.

The Fire Department Auxiliary announced it had opened a resale shop on February 13th.

The Civic Association created its new brochure, and planned for harbor beautification. It asked for volunteers for April 28th to help plant trees and flowers (heather, lavender, and marigolds), and place six new benches around the Harbor.

Thirty Years Ago

The Beacon reported on a meeting between the Game Club and the DNR. Plans were made to try planting more turkeys, this time live-trapped instead of farm-raised. It was thought they would not be given feed because in the past this has made them too tame. Adding pheasants to the Island was considered, as well as Makinaw Trout fingerlings in the harbor—they’d have to be penned for three weeks. Cutting for habitat and burning off huckleberry marshes were also discussed.

Islanders formed a Businessmen’s Association. It’s first project was to bring a restaurant back to St. James to replace The Castaways, which was not expected to open.

After a lengthy study by the Dominican Sisters of Grand Rapids, the Island school was notified that the Sisters would be removed within the next two years, due to a shortage in their ranks. Since they were an important part of our culture, and had consistently elevated our students’ test scores, it was hoped a way could be found to prevent this—Continued on page 12.

Martha Miller announced that the Beaver Island Players could use more help for its planned summer theatrical productions.

The passing of Alberta LaFreniere, Bussey's wife, was announced. After brain surgery in Chicago to remove a tumor left her paralyzed, she came back to the Island, partially paralyzed and unable to speak. She was cared for here by an informal hospice during her final eight months.

Passings were also noted for Charlevoix's Bruce Zeitler, the brother of Dick LaFreniere's wife Jean, and Margaret (Dunlevy) Miller, who had been born here in 1886.

Help with tree planting was offered by Pete LoDico, posted in Boyne City.

Mat and Ellie Hohn noted that their St. Pat's Day dinner was disrupted by a band of hungry racoons.

Forty Years Ago The Beacon celebrated an early appearance (April 2nd) by the Coast Guard cutter Sundew. But winds held the cut ice in the harbor, where it refroze, prompting a second visit six days later.

Two state representatives, Don Gordon and Riemer vanTill, pushed a bill through the House that would award a $20,000 grant for the restoration of the Protar Home.

The Island said goodbye to its Conservation Fire Officer of the past five years, Vern Fitzpatrick, who was promoted to a post in the northernmost tip of the Upper Peninsula. He had done many things to fit into this community (such as fixing radios and TVs, and promoting activities for kids.) His departure was filled by Bill Wagner, who agreed to move here with wife Marge, daughter Jody, and son Dennis.

The Civic Association began selling $1 tickets for a $100 vacation.

Thanks to captain Justin McCauley in St. Joseph, a film promoting the Island was shown to the Southwestern Michigan Boy Scout Council, which led to a plan for 50 scouts to come here for a week the following June.

Passings noted included Elizabeth (Johnston) Dunlop, born here in 1883, Dan McCauley's daughter Mary Codden, former Island resident Fred Dubiel, and the father of Mrs. Karl Baber, new manager of the Beaver Island Lodge.

Rogers Carlisle reported on his luck trapping beaver. He said interesting things happened on his trap line. One was seeing a woodcock so tame he splashed water on it but it would not move. Another was finding the track of a coyote that was also after beaver, as well as signs in the snow that a confrontation had ended in favor of the flattail.

Fox Lake was restocked with brook trout, and the opening of the season was eagerly anticipated. Smelt nets and sucker spears were being readied for what promised to be a good season.

Township Airport manager Karl Kuebler announced that 900 planes landed in the summer of 1963. Dick LaFreniere was lauded for having volunteered to man the Unicom, which allowed pilots to obtain weather information.

Adelia Beeuwkes' bibliography of Beaver Island's Mormon Colony was offered by the Civic Association.

Chicago's Beaver Island Party had more attendees than ever before— including Franklin Left, who flew up from Jacksonville for it and then flew back the next day. George Egbert reported on Lansing's Beaver Island Party, claiming the official tally of 216 missed many who were there. The Shamrock's Beaver Island Party also did quite well.
Chili Cook-off a Delicious Success

On Match 11th a hungry crowd that had gathered outside the Peaine Town Hall became a little rowdy as the five judges at work inside decided on second helpings of the 11 tantalizing chilies before rendering what they all agreed was a difficult decision. Once the prizes were awarded, seventy people rushed in and began to chow down on the various chilies, which could be accompanied by corn bread, sliced onion, crackers, and cheese—followed by brownies and a variety of cakes.

Many lingered, enjoying the camaraderie following a delightful, filling meal. But new arrivals kept streaming through the door—one counter gave up at 113, his head-counting thrown into confusion by the arrival of some stylish multi-tipped spikes. Donations at the door produced $500 for the Sports' Boosters, the event's sponsor.

Overcoming the difficulty of choosing the best of so many good entries, the judges awarded first place to the “roast beef” style chili prepared by Jim and Pam Campbell, second to Debbie Bousquet's hot-pepper version, and third to Jamie Campbell's mouth-watering old-fashioned concoction.

Fran Moroney

Long-time Island visitor Francis J. Moroni passed away in Oak Park from the cancer he lived with for the past eight years.

His life was remarkably varied. As a young man he was a gifted student athlete, being part of a gold-medal relay team and running in many Chicago Marathons. He bicycled across the country three times to raise money for charity.

A resigned Catholic priest from Rockford, IL, he received a degree in Theology from St. Mary's in Baltimore and later spent two years studying at the Vatican before earning a master's degree from the University of Chicago. After working for United Way and counseling for Lutheran Services, he turned to business, founding the Alpha Business Service Company. After additional study of Great Books he earned a second master's from Concordia University and became an instructor in the Chicago Public Schools.

He is survived by his wife Domenica, daughters Francesca Cooper and Gabriela Moroney, sisters Rita Murphy and Mary Lou Shepard, and brother Paul.

Beaver Island on the fictional Map

One more writer has proven unable to resist the lure of Beaver Island in looking for a setting for much of the action in his latest book: Iron Ore Bay's Bill Vann, whose novel of suspense, Retired, keeps returning to a recognizable Beaver for its well-written climactic scenes.

The book starts off innocently enough with Harry Jones, fresh from having quit his bookkeeping job at a car dealership at age sixty, deciding to rent an office. He tells his wife he's thinking of offering financial advice but really just needs a place where he can get away from the house, which has become the crafts workshop for her and her girlfriends. A safe enough step—until his first client ensnares him in a complex but believable plot that takes him off to the races strapped to a runaway train.

What befalls him is something he brings on himself by exercising the tenacity and deductive power he had never quite displayed in his former mundane life. Before he knows it, he's in over his head, not knowing the truth about who his new associates really are. It's a dangerous predicament, but thankfully some of the characters we've all seen hanging around the docks in St. James are ready to….

To say more would be to say too much. Suffice it to describe the book as an entertaining page-turner whose fictional world shares an extensive border with our real one. Some of the action involves car dealerships, handled with the same kind of expertise as another Island-connected author, Jerry Cooper, displays in his books involving interstate trucking.

Even though his next book is said to be totally different, the many fans this one will bring will hope for further adventures in our Lake Michigan archipelago.

Don’t Miss the Citizen of the Year Banquet

The Chamber of Commerce reports that well over 20 nominations for Beaver Island Citizen of the Year have been received, and thanks all those who submitted them. The winners will be selected by the Chamber’s Board or Directors, and awards presented at a banquet at Nina’s Restaurant on April 24th to which everyone is invited. Seating is limited to 100, so call Nina’s for reservations at (231) 448-2396 as soon as you know you’ll be able to attend! Dinner choices are champagne chicken or prime rib, and includes hors d’oeuvres, salad, and dessert. The price is $29.00. Nina’s will pay a portion to the Chamber to cover the cost of the awards program and also to help market Beaver Island as a year-around tourist destination. Cocktails will begin at 6:00 with the dinner at 7:00 and awards following.

It’s a Wonderful Life...

The Gregg family would like to express their deepest appreciation for all of the efforts made by this wonderful community. During Phil’s recent episode at the hospital, our family began receiving a nearly continuous influx of love and support from friends. There is no way we can truly express how deeply touched we all are by the sincere and generous support of a community that has become an extended family.

The fact that the Island has come together to support our family is really no surprise, but the magnitude of the generosity is overwhelming. The prayers, phone calls, rides, cards, hugs, meals, and visits are truly priceless.

We are so happy we could bring Dad back to his Island home, but nobody is happier about this than Dad. As he told Russ Green on the trip home from the airport, “Even the bumps in the road feel good.”

This community has once again outdone itself, and we are so happy that Dad decided to move here all those years ago. We always knew we were blessed with a great family, but with the recent events we began to see just how large our family really is. This is a very special place, and you all contribute to what makes it special every day.

We will never again be able to watch the movie It’s a Wonderful Life without thinking of the events of this past week.

From the bottom of our hearts we thank you all for all you do and for being who you are.

Sincerely with Love,
Phil & Lil Gregg [and Bobby too]

I have always had a love affair with trees. From my earliest recollections as a tomboy I was always climbing in or swinging from trees. When I was eight or nine I became interested in gardening. My first attempt at tree propagation began when I rooted a twig from a huge willow from a nearby park and planted it in our yard. I recall that classic poem written by Joyce Kilmer, Trees. Students in most schools certainly were at one time or another introduced to that poem. Joyce Kilmer was born in 1886 and was probably ahead of his time as a tree hugger. One of my favorite verses is:

*A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;*

While visiting in California I came across a book, Remarkable Trees of the World, by Thomas Pakenham. He is a British historian who has spent the last decade investigating the lives of the world’s most dramatic trees, many of which are in danger of destruction. It is arranged according to the character of the trees: Giants and Dwarfs, Methuselahs, Shrines, Dreams, Lovers and Dancers, Ghosts, and Trees in Peril. I was astonished to learn that the top three awards, for the world’s largest tree by volume, the tallest tree in the world, and the oldest tree, measured by scientists, were found in California.

The chief giant is General Sherman in the Sierra Nevada. This giant sequoia weighs over 1400 tons. It may be the largest single living thing in the world.

The height record goes to another Californian—a 368-foot high Coast Redwood recently declared the tallest tree in the world.

Among the oldest are the wind-blasted bristle-cone pines of the White Mountains of California. Old Methuselah himself was found to be 4600 years old—the oldest tree in the world that was measured by the scientists.

Even though Beaver Island’s trees are unlikely to be recognized worldwide, the Island has trees of distinction too. The beautiful old birch on Fox Lake Road is one of our treasures. It is the destination of hundreds of tourists. People photograph it—artists draw and paint it. The Island is also home to two American chestnut trees. Just how these have escaped the disease that wiped out the March’s weather ran true to form: cold, colder, warm, then cold, with lots of snow. A modest warm-up occurred in mid-month, capped by high winds, rain, and a plunge of 23° in half a day. The result was that on March 21st, a bright sunny day of 20°, a crust formed on our two feet plus of snow that looked strong enough to support a man.

A Fine Crust

So I went for a walk, across a field, onto Font Lake—criss-crossed by snowmobile tracks—and out over the top of the junipers that normally clog the fields on Font’s south side and prevent human penetration. Now it looked like bright broad swirls of hard frosting crossed by the tracks of several animals, primarily deer, whose narrow hooves plunged through the surface. Some of them had gone by in ones and twos, but there were also several well-worn trails. The coyotes and rabbits, with broader pads, were able, like me, to stay on top.

The next day I took another walk, this time with Dan Wardlow, who I picked up at the beautiful Shanoule B & B. The temperature had reached 27°. He wanted to see his property down Camp #3 Trail, where he plans to build. He had brought snowshoes, and Joan others is a mystery…possibly the same mystery that allows apple trees to produce Beaver Island apples without worms and without chemical interference. Several years ago, CMU verified that the Island has a stand of virgin cedar trees.

I have a secret tree, an enormous pine. I like to hike to it and sit underneath it on the thick carpet of pine needles. Looking up through the branches, you can’t see the sky. I imagine all the creatures cradled by this tree over the years, safe from winds and storms. It was possible such a tree inspired Kilmer to write this verse:

Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.

We are so lucky here on our Island. The forests are diverse and inviting. Take a walk some day into the cedars at the Little Sand Bay Preserve. It’s enchanting, especially in the spring when the brooks are running, the skunk cabbage is beginning to grow, and sunlight shines through the trees, spotlighting ferns.

Some of our forests are a mix of birch, beach, Eastern hemlock, white pine, and aspen. Some evergreens tolerant of dense shades grow here also. I love to walk in these areas in the spring, before the leaves appear, to see the carpet of wildflowers…trout lilies, Dutchman’s breeches, trillium, hepatica, and spring beauties to name a few. Morel mushrooms also appear in the spring, and ferns in great profusion.

The forest floor of leaf litter along with fallen branches and logs provides critical habitat for insects, mice, shrews, and chipmunks. A unique micro-habitat often found in hardwoods is shallow pools of water in the spring. These seasonal wetlands produce insects for migrating and nesting birds. They provide habitat for salamanders and several kinds of frogs. Other inhabitants of the forests are the songbirds, owls, and hawks that feed and nest there. Game species that call the forest their home include the ruffed grouse, woodcock, snowshoe hare, squirrel, wild turkey, whitetail deer, and the coyote.

Is there any question why I’m so in love with trees?

I embrace trees; therefore I am a tree hugger. I dare you to hug a tree sometime and not fall in love. – Lois Williams

Banville was glad to provide a second pair. We took them along but left them in the car because the crust had held.

We wandered through the mature hardwoods north of Greene’s Lake, able to see for a mile because of the lack of leaves. We encountered several deer tracks as well as those of two coyotes who’d loped along at a good speed side by side, about fifteen feet apart. Somewhere in the distance we heard a call we could not identify—probably a bird, but we weren’t sure. We came to a 15’-high bluff east of the power line cut east of the West Side Road, and looped back into the magic frozen wonderland rather than risk reaching civilization.

The next day I tried it again out behind our home, but the temperature had risen and the crust was no longer as strong. Walking became a trudge, and on occasion my foot went through, sometimes into six inches or so of water thawed on the bottom side by the warmth of the earth. I came home exhausted, realizing how unique of an experience it had been the previous two days to stride along quickly and without care on a hard white carpet two feet above the ground.

–William Cashman
Aside from the music and dancing and drinking, and in addition to the retelling of certain stories saved for this once-a-year event, much of the celebratory spirit that convulsed the entire Island and its provinces downstate was focused on Saturday afternoon’s downtown events: the tug o’ war, the cart race, and an event watched closely by a dozen hungry dogs, the infamous fish toss. Amazingly the tug o’ war, for which no one counted the tuggers on each side (thus permitting an imbalance), was essentially a dead heat with a disputed victory entered in the ledger for the country cousins, the hay-seeders. aside from the music and dancing and drinking, and in addition to the retelling of certain stories saved for this once-a-year event, much of the celebratory spirit that convulsed the entire Island and its provinces downstate was focused on Saturday afternoon's downtown events: the tug o' war, the cart race, and an event watched closely by a dozen hungry dogs, the infamous fish toss. Amazingly the tug o' war, for which no one counted the tuggers on each side (thus permitting an imbalance), was essentially a dead heat with a disputed victory entered in the ledger for the country cousins, the hay-seeders. As for the cart race, well, that sure was a nice cart Rich Gillespie created just for this event.

But the fish toss produced several serious charges of chicanery the next morning, accusations ranging from excessive fish-greasing to a flat-out accusation that the winner, the Charlevoix Courier's Jeremy McBain, had unfairly used the diversion of a sweet lullaby played moments before the toss on his treasured bagpipes to lull his competitors into a dispiriting languor—a charge seemingly proved when the staunch lad removed plugs from his own ears before gripping the fish, which his jealous detractors said had only been worn to prevent him from succumbing to his own siren's spell.
Hospitality Abounds on Beaver Island

Have you ever had an idea claw around in the back of your head, just sitting there refusing to go away? I have had those sharp talons poking me for 2 or 3 years now and they originate at a place called Beaver Island. For the last several years I have wanted to explore what the Island had to offer, but I just could never seem to fit it in. In November my lovely wife Lori blessed me with a beauty of a baby girl (Natalie Rose) and it looked like the Island would have to sit in my dreams a little longer. Or so I thought. It turns out, under closer scrutiny by some impartial Grandparents, that this is no ordinary baby, she is the most magical baby that ever hit this green earth, and if Natalie did not visit them soon all kinds of disasters would surely strike.

So off Natalie headed, accompanied by her personal bodyguard and big brother Mitchell, with mom at the wheel. As my wife was heading out the door she swivelled and took a last look at the house and then turned to me. In her eyes I could see a great love and respect. Ever so sweetly and with a tremble in her voice she spoke these words: Instead of staying home and messing up the house, call your cousin Scott Scarlett in Traverse City and go ice fishing with him!

Now this was going to take some doing. Cousin Scott is a man of the highest moral character and it would take some sales pitch to get him away from his chores. Exactly 23.7 seconds later I was able to convince him this would be the greatest fishing adventure ever, and he was in. The discussion soon turned to where we would be going. I explained to him about my haunting visions of Beaver Island. As I said, Scott is a man with great character, and, not wanting to see his fellow man suffer, it was decided we would do something about this before my idea started to fester and tumor up on my brain. “Just one question,” Scott said, “Where do we fish when we get there.” Knowing I needed some time to think of an answer, and not wanting to seem foolish, I said the only thing I could in such a precarious situation: “What? I did not hear you, some background noise....”

“You really haven’t thought this through too far, have you little cuz.”

Having just the right amount of time for inspiration to strike, I lied through my teeth and said, “Oh yeah, I got a fisherman waiting for us as we walk off the plane. I will see you tonight with all the details.” I promptly hung up.

Being that it was 1:30 p.m. and I was to see him in just hours, I had to make some quick phone calls. The Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce was first, but the answering machine said they close at 1:00. Oh boy, strike one on the first call. So I thought, let’s try the net. www.beaverisland.org, Yahoo! Look at the information; I’m warm now, I thought. I started calling names in the white pages. I called the first several numbers available and the phone calls would go something along these lines:

“Hi there, to whom I am speaking (if you got my call, insert your name here.) You do not know me but my name is Craig Chapman from Big Rapids and I’m coming over to your Island this weekend and am looking for the best fisherman there. Would you know who that might be?” Normally there was an awkward pause of silence at this stage of the conversation. However after a few minutes the conversation would open up further and I soon had names in front of me: Denny Cook, Darrel Butler, and Marty Kuligoski.

A call to Denny and Marty’s phone numbers yielded answering machines, so I left messages. Next I moved on to Darrel, who must have thought it was his lucky day to find out he just won a chance to escort not one but two mainlanders all around the Island and take us fishing for an entire weekend. I soon found I was at a disadvantage not knowing Darrel and his straight-to-the-point fact-finding methods. After about 12 minutes of talking he seemed to have me sliced and diced to his satisfaction. With a hearty laugh he said, “I don’t give a crap, if you want to go fishing come on over and I’ll take you. Oh, have you called Marty yet?” Apparently Darrel had heard of Marty’s legendary fish prowess as well, I thought to myself. “Don’t worry about it, I’ll tell him all about you and this phone call, goodbye,” he said, and hung up.

I was feeling confident when I left the office to run some quick errands. I returned to see a message had come in that said, “call Marty from the Island.” My confidence level was plummeting when I made the phone call. “Hey is this the guy from Big Rapids? I’m sitting here with the guys. When the hell are you coming, anyway? Better make it quick; a snow front is moving in!” Oh yeah, we are on, baby! I could face my big cousin standing tall.
A fine gentleman who introduced himself as Chopp met us at the airport. Well hello Chopp, I am Chappy, lets fish. Off we went to get the lads. After introductions and heartfelt ribbing about how they just wanted to meet someone crazy enough to make a phone call like mine, they decided we made the cut and could sit on the ice with them.,

We were introduced to the Island properly by seeing what it is like to keep the lifeline alive. Snowplowing the runway was our initiation. Wow, that is a lot of asphalt, and rough on the body riding in those plow rigs. However the time spent hearing stories and folklore was well spent. These guys are proud of their home and did a nice job representing it.

The day found us on the ice sitting in a palace of a shanty. I could understand the bunk beds and the stove with oven; however, the sink pushed it over the top. I was sitting there like royalty when I then remembered that this had been the only kingdom in the U.S.A. Suddenly this affluent style of living made sense.

The sun going down found us at Marty's house. Bless their hearts for making us feel welcome; they threw a party. The camaraderie and stories were legendary. We ate like kings: gumbo, Cajun walleye, and bounden sausage. Marty opened up his house to us and we were living large.

The next day found us on the ice again, catching our first pike before we could get the third tip-up set. It would prove to be a wonderful day; my eyes never once turned toward the mainland. Even Denny Cook came out to fish with us. Cousin Scott and I nodded to each other with a knowing grin; we struck gold with this crew. All we would have to do is reel in fish until tendonitis set in. We left the ice at dusk and with tired bodies headed for the Shamrock for good food, spirits, and a friendly crowd to rejuvenate the soul. We soon had our groove back on, and enjoyed the crowd and hospitality until the wee hours—even the old man who pestered us with jokes.

We were awakened by a morning phone call from Darrel wanting to know if we were ready to hit the ice. Holy cow, all this guy wants to do is fish! Didn't he know we were just some soft mainlanders who needed some down time? I looked at Scott and he was rubbing his shoulder from pulling in that big one yesterday. Several cups of coffee later and a good rubbing of BenGay, and we were on the bay. Forty-mile/hour winds with heavy gusts would not detour us. We started spudding some holes and began marking fish with some new-fangled electronic gear Darrel and Marty had. I would try to explain it, but it is too technical for the lay person. Sure.

We fished, the wind blew, and the ice heaved and cracked. After a while it was agreed that if we stayed on the ice any longer we would float to the mainland. We got to enjoy Steve's hospitality in his barn on the harbor as we watched our previous fishing holes break off and float out to sea.

I am back on the mainland after a wonderful weekend, thanks to all the guys—and a quick note to Alex, Gena, and Christi: thanks for the baklava.

Beaver Island Thoughts

Normally when we get on the plane or ferry for Beaver Island our hearts lift with joy and anticipation. Beaver Island is our refuge, a place where we can be with good friends and for a moment leave our problems far behind on the mainland. We love Beaver Island when it is full of excitement. We also cherish the quiet times of winter when the heavy snow muffles the Island. Even if our visit is only for a weekend the Island allows us to revitalize and feel invigorated. Sometimes at night one of us will wake. Possibly we are both awake, but we lie silently, alone with our private thoughts. These are the times when we think of our son, Ronald. Certainly it can be painful, but we like to recall his childhood and all the good times we had as a family. We remember his high school years and how well he performed on the varsity wrestling team. We think of all the potential he held in his life. We feel sure he would still work at Haggard’s Plumbing and Heating. He would still have many, many good friends and loving sisters and a brother. He would have more than an armful of nephews and nieces. Maybe, he would be engaged to marry, or already be married. Most of all during these dark, quiet nights we think of all the love we hold in our hearts for Ronald and how very much he is missed. We love you, Ronald, and you will always be with us. And so our thoughts continue...and so our love continues. God bless you, Ronald.

Ideas for Arranmore Park

A year ago at this time, Beaver Islanders were just returning from a wonderful journey to Ireland, where they completed the second half of a Twinning Ceremony with Arranmore.

Following their return, a group began working on ideas for Arranmore Park to commemorate the linkage between the two islands. If you’re interested in the project, the primary contact person is Paul Cole (616) 977-3299, or you can view more sketches and discuss ideas on a new web site: www.arranmorepark.com
“An Evening with Stephen Sondheim”

Rehearsals are underway for Beaver Island’s first dinner theatre event, An Evening with Stephen Sondheim, scheduled for May 8 at the Holy Cross Hall.

First there’ll be a gourmet buffet at 6:30, prepared by chef Deborah Harwood. The menu will include two main courses, salads, potatoes and rice, and vegetables. Beer and wine will be available. The production will start at 8:00, and at 9:00 Harwood’s special “Venetian Dessert Table” will open.

Co-directors for An Evening with Stephen Sondheim are Brenda LeFevre and Elaine West. They promise a show packed with the witty lyrics and humorous emotions Broadway audiences have come to expect from a Sondheim production. Sondheim wrote a multitude of shows, including Sweeney Todd, A Little Night Music, Follies, Company, and A Funny Thing Happened On The Way to The Forum. His witty lyrics can also be found in West Side Story and Gypsy.

The Beaver Island dinner theater production is being financed in part by the Beaver Island Music Fund. Opera singer Martha Guth and Harwood established the fund last summer with proceeds from the Summer Solstice Concert and High Tea at Deerwood Lodge. The Beaver Island Music Fund, sponsored by the BIHS, is designed to promote musical activities on Beaver Island. Proceeds from the dinner theater event will be donated to the Music Fund.

The cast includes Jayne Bailey, Melissa Bailey, Phil Becker, Bill Detwiler, Shirley Detwiler, Susie Fisher, Bob Hamil, Brenda LeFevre, Chris McMullen and Elaine West. Pinky Harmon will provide the narration. Accompanists are Judi Meister and Mike Scripps. The production crew includes: Krys Lyle - Artistic Coordinator; Bob Hamil - Lighting, Sound and Stage Design; and Shirley Detwiler - Stage Manager.

Seating is limited and reservations a must. Tickets for the dinner theatre are $30 per person. Checks may be made out to: Brenda LeFevre - Dinner Theatre, and mailed to: Brenda LeFevre, P.O. Box 26, Beaver Island, MI 49782.

Strang Writers’ Agenda

The May 21-23 Strang Writers’ Group has set its agenda. On Friday they’ll meet at the Emerald Isle Hotel’s Conference Room for readings of their works-in-progress. The next morning there’ll be a discussion of Strang’s motivation and abundant psychological quirks. Weather permitting, a visit to Island sites and a boat tour of other islands are scheduled. Then the group will work on a mission statement, consider such matters as the future of “Strang studies” and the value of fiction for shedding light on character, begin to plan for the sesquicentennial of Strang’s death in 2006, and conduct a reading of John Baldwin’s play.

Letters: To the Board of Directors, BIRHC

The staff of the Beaver Island Rural Health Center wishes to express our appreciation and support of the current health center Board of Directors. It is due to their time, effort and dedication that not only we, but the entire Island community has this wonderful new facility.

It is our belief that despite the vocal disapproval of a few, the Board continues to work for the overall betterment of the Health Center and the community it serves. The staff wholeheartedly supports the decisions of the Board in the past and are extremely confident in their leadership and decisions in the future. A heartfelt thank you to each and everyone board member for their enormous amount of volunteer hours set forth.

We hope the Board will continue working towards their goal to improving health care on the Island. While they have made great strides to date, we know there are many difficult decisions yet to be made and we feel that they are in the best position to make them.

Many years ago there was a sign in the Beachcomber bar that read: “It is but a rare privilege to live on this Island”. We would like to add it’s also a rare privilege to work in such a beautiful new building, and we take seriously our responsibility of continuing the long tradition of providing quality health care to the residents of Beaver Island under your guidance.

– The staff of the BIRHC

P.S. Thank you Connie for the many many boxes you hauled in your own vehicle from the Township Building to the new facility.

Charles Anglin

Charles W. Anglin, 64, of Rockford and Bonner’s Landing, passed away at his home on February 21. He was a graduate of Creston High School and attended Davis Tech. Early in his working life he was a sales representative for a pharmaceutical company, assisting several pharmacies in getting started.

Mr. Anglin was a very diversified person with many interests and goals. In 1979 he purchased Executive Air Transport and continued his ownership until 2000, and was also the owner of Game Shooter Limit. He was an avid hunter and arranged hunts for many people, and enjoyed traveling throughout the world to find his game. He was a member of the Safari Club International - Michigan Chapter, and Ducks Unlimited. He is survived by his children; Kelly Anglin-Noordewier and her husband, Jerry of Rockford, Rebecca Anglin-Hondalus and her husband, Joseph of Cedar Springs, and Paul A. Anglin of Rockford; his grandchildren, Kathrine, Rieley, and Kylynn.

A right proper Irish wake will be held at a later date. Those planning an expression of sympathy are asked to consider the charity of their choice.

Talent Show finds talent ... Everywhere!

This year’s talent show featured a variety of acts from the familiar—long-time favorites Sheri Timsak (who followed her daughter Crystal), and Stryder and Joddy Crosswhite, for example—to the unexpected (and unexpectedly good): five capable and creative kids from the Lighthouse School, playing guitars (or creating their own instrumentation) and singing, some singing their own songs. Signe’s well-coached Irish Tappers demonstrated considerable poise (Signe herself showed off her talent at song and dance); Mike and Sharon Hurkmans, who provided their kareoke machine, did some of their trademark songs; and a scattering of performers new to this annual review (Bailey McDonough, Melissa Peters, Marissa Crandall, and Kristy Bousquet) made this a memorable evening. The crowd favorite? Had to be Jewell Cushman, who, when performing with his mother and sister Brighid and cousins Briana and Brogan Maudrie, heard the whispering call of nature, stopped the show, and took a quick trip to the woodsy back of the venerable Parish Hall. Either Jewell, or Levi Conner, who wowed everyone with a tap solo, proving they were right to let him into what had been a gender-tilted group.
Health Center Board Meeting

The BIRHC Board held a well-attended meeting on March 20th. The financial report indicated that left-over construction grant money would support the Health Center’s operation for the next year and a half or so. Then there will be a problem because expenses are projected to continuously exceed income for the foreseeable future—despite the progress being made on billing and collecting.

Much of the discussion that followed was intended to get everyone on the same page regarding financial terminology, such as when a delinquent payment becomes a bad debt. Board member Eula Thomas suggested that the Board could better understand the BIRHC’s finances if it got more-detailed reports on a monthly basis. She also distributed printouts showing what Medisoft, the BIRHC’s tracking software, could do: simplify accounting; speed up insurance billing; improve collections; and streamline management. This company also provides coding updates on a regular basis on a CD, and allows for all sorts of extra material, such as photographs, to be stored with patient histories. However, billing will be outsourced because a reputable firm has offered to do it for 6% of what is collected.

A snazzy new speaker phone for conference calls was unveiled, and it made two missing members part of the meeting, Joe Reed, loud and clear from Florida, and Anne Glendon in her hotel room overlooking Puget Sound.

After Donna Kubic reported on operations, Don Spencer described the process by which Arlene Brennan was located and hired (and mentioned that her contacts had donated about $75,000 worth of goods and services)—her references were impeccable—and then Arlene summarized her tenure. Donna pointed out that over the past four years patient loads increased to 2,603 in 2002 and then dropped to 2,369 last year—about 200/month. This year, 952 patients have been seen in the first 5 months, with an increase expected in the summer. Those with no insurance have been about 11%. Somewhat fewer have had insurance with companies we were not prepared to bill, which will now be billed by the outsource. Seventy percent of patients are residents, the rest split between visitors and seasonal. The common complaints have been: #1 hypertension; #2 high cholesterol; #3 upper respiratory; and #4 allergies. More than half the visits involved blood draws.

Arlene said that a good team was now in place, and that the move had been accomplished satisfactorily. Great strides have been made with accounts receivables, coding, improving the data base, creating meaningful reports, and understanding procedures. A method for continuously working on a quality improvement plan is being investigated.

Seventy of the 230 surveys have now been returned. It was suggested that the survey might be refined and circulated every three years.

Grants are being sought for more defibrillators; the Boat Company is also planning to add onto the Emerald Isle.

The running-out of propane, which occurred early in March, was explained. GLE had only filled two of the four 1,000-gallon tanks connected to the BIRHC line. Some propane was consumed during construction, for which $1,800 will be backbilled. Then the doors were kept open during the move-in. And it was only recently that the nighttime temperature was lowered from 65° to 60°.

At the end of the meeting, two matters drew interest. Since Arlene’s expertise so far transcends that of the Board, her involvement was extended to facilitate the detransition; a special donation arrived to cover her reduced rate for 3-day/month availability over the next three or four months, so that as questions come up, she’ll be ready to provide answers.

The second matter involved a glitch in construction: some of the lines required by Dr. White were not run. This unfortunate breakdown in communication was bemoaned, and the audience was assured that Dr. White would bear no extra expense.
One Hundred Years Ago

April 7, 1904 Local News: “St James Special to the Grand Rapids Herald - Dan J. Bonner, a prominent farmer of this place, was returning from Corinne a few days ago, when his wagon and load of hay and feed broke through the ice. Bonner then cut his team loose and started for shore leading the horses. Soon he and the horses went through. Bonner succeeded in getting himself out, but was compelled to abandon the team.”

“Advices from Beaver Island state that Mrs. Gibson, who for more than forty years has kept the Gibson House at St. James, is very ill with but slight chance of recovery. There are very many people in Northern Michigan and elsewhere, who have enjoyed her kindness and bounteous hospitality, who will learn of her illness with profound regret. This good, motherly old lady’s life has been a blessing and benediction. We sincerely hope she will recover, but if she does not, she will long be remembered by a host of friends.”

April 14, 1904 Marine News: “Engineer Sherman began fitting out the steamer Beaver Monday morning, and it is hoped to make a trip to the Beavers within a week.”

April 21, 1904 Beaver Island News: “The B. I. L. Co have again resumed operations – the too-too sounds natural.”

“The Fisherman’s union have their charter with membership of sixty-two.”

“Officers of Peaine Township elected Monday as follows: Supervisor, W. D. Gallagher; Clerk, Phil C. Gallagher; Treasurer, Dan P. Boyle; Highway commissioner, Frances McCafferty; Justice of the Peace, Dan T. Gallagher. A lively contest resulted.”

“Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gill of Harbor springs and William Gibson of Petoskey, came over on the ice last week on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Julia Gibson. Mrs. Gibson’s remarkable vitality overcame the disease and at last report she is very much improved. Messrs. Gill and Gibson returned leaving Mrs. Gill with her mother. Miss Ida Gibson, who was nearly overcome by the long vigil, is also much better.”

“The female population of Beaver Island is rapidly increasing. A fine girl arrived at the homes of each of the following families within 12 hours of each other during the two days preceding Easter: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Poole, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McDonald, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Enkil. Mothers and babies are all doing nicely.”

“Charlie Roddy had the misfortune to dislocate his thumb last Monday. Prompt reduction made Charley a happy boy once more.”

“Hon. D. T. Gallagher of Peaine Township met with an accident at his barn by falling from the loft to the floor beneath, the result being a fractured collarbone.”

“An Easter program given by the Beaver Island Union School Sunday evening was attended by a good sized audience.”

April 28, 1904 Local News: “Rev. Father Zugelder, of St. James was a passenger over on the Beaver Monday, on his way to Grand Rapids.”

“The steamer Beaver took nearly a full load of seed peas to Beaver Island Wednesday.”

“Prof. Cox, the Chicago Weatherman, and family will spend two months on Beaver Island the coming summer, and while there will decide on the points for display stations.”

“Among the passengers from St. James on the Beaver’s first trip were Supervisor W. J. Gallagher and Anthony Malloy.”

“The B. I. Lumber Co. at St. James, has about two million feet of hard-wood lumber on the dock waiting for shipment, and a large cut is yet to come. It is indeed a strange sight for an old settler who visits Beaver Island–a fine looking locomotive coming in with a train-load of logs. There is a large quantity of fine hardwood timber on Beaver Island, and much on adjoining islands, that will keep the St. James saw mill at work many years to come.”

Marine News: “The steamer Beaver made her first trip to Beaver Island Saturday, reaching the old McCann dock at ‘the point’. She went again Monday and Wednesday, and will continue on the old schedule. Capt. E. S. Small took her over Saturday in the absence of Capt. Campbell and Capt. George Weaver made the run Monday.” —Joyce Bartels
BITA Proposed Application

A Public Notice from BITA: Proposed State Application for Capital and Operating Assistance:

All citizens are advised that the Beaver Island Transportation Authority has prepared an application for State of Michigan financial assistance for Fiscal Year 2005, as required under Act 51 of the public Acts of 1951, as amended.

The Beaver Island Transportation Authority is requesting $516,175.00 at an estimated cost of $455,175.00 capital, and $61,000.00 operating assistance.
